Mohapatra, Managing Director of KEMPPPI India Private Limited, Chennai and Mr. Jose P Philip, Chairman, IIW Cochin Branch during the Inaugural function of INTERNATIONAL WELDING CONGRESS on 7th December 2017 at the Chennai Trade Centre. Subsequently, certificate of participation were awarded to all participants.

I am happy to announce that the competition will be organized this year also as fulfillment of objective of IIW-India. This competition will be providing opportunity to the young engineers to put their professional skills and knowledge to innovate new products or services or theories to put into practice as a team member.

In our country, the field of Welding Technology has got a tremendous scope for development and growth and require to mould new ideas, new concepts and new products. Those companies and organizations engaged in the fabrication and welding industries are to build and sustain competitive advantage and they should take new initiatives to innovate their own core competencies and processes. This has to be implemented through the Young Engineers working with these organizations. The organizations should motivate their young professionals to put more effort in the field of research and development for innovating new ideas using their creativity, knowledge and skills.

IIW-India envisages to conduct this competition in two stages. First stage would be at the respective Branch Level and those selected will be invited to present papers about their project at Second Level at Cochin. The winners will be awarded prize money and rolling trophies as follows:

IIW - KEMPPI	1st Prize: Rs. 50,000/-
